Department of Political Science and Diplomacy

About Us

The Department of Political Science and Diplomacy, established in 1981 within the College of Social Sciences, is dedicated to educating students in diverse theories and practices. This education empowers them to scientifically analyze and comprehend political phenomena. Our aim is to cultivate intellectuals who possess a comprehensive understanding of both domestic and international landscapes, thereby contributing thoughtfully to Korea's future. Notably, the department places a strong emphasis on nurturing professional women to be leaders in various sectors of our rapidly evolving society.

Therefore, the department's curriculum is designed to equip students with the professional skills and broad insights necessary for analyzing and comprehending political phenomena. Additionally, the department fosters in-depth understanding and active participation in specialized fields by operating departmental academic clubs such as the 'Mock Parliamentary Preparation Committee', 'HanAeum', and the 'Korean Public Diplomacy Research Society'. Moreover, the department offers a variety of scholarship programs. These programs not only provide extensive educational opportunities through financial support, ensuring that economic constraints do not hinder academic progress, but also enable participation in overseas training programs. This approach is a testament to our dedication to enhancing students' professional competencies in the global era.

Our Objectives

1. Acquire systematic and specialized knowledge in political science and diplomacy.
2. Develop critical thinking and analytical skills
3. Cultivate forward-thinking individuals who contribute to the international community

Our Vision

Creative and socially responsible future leaders with critical thinking skills, international awareness, and insight who can proactively respond to global issues.
